*The well known courtesy of Mr. BONOMI, than whom, as the associate of the Prussian Scientific Mission to Egypt, none are more competent to define the principles of pyramidal construction by Dr. LEPSIUS discovered, enables me to present a woodcut, which comprehends the main features of the architectural law under discussion. A few observations will suffice.

1. The PYRAMID. The base line of the central illustration represents the level of Memphite alluvium, at high-water mark, say about twenty-two feet above the low Nile; at which season (May), the latter will here averaged six feet water over the bed of the River.
